PREFACE

I ADY NURRARD'S paintings have been such a continual source of pleasure to her family that I have prepared this collection of reproductions for her children and grand-children as a memorial of her work. The collection is sadly incomplete. She printed mostly in oils, and oil printings are more difficult to house or to preserve than water colours. Some of her pictures were given away, some were sold at Exhibitions in India, others were damaged or lost on steamer voyages, thus it has come about that many of her oil printings of Indian subjects are not now available for this collection.

Young artists like to sell their pictures, they regard selling as a sign of success. My wife used to say, when she was young "Let us sell what we can I shall have plenty of time for painting when we reture" But at the age of forty-six she became incapacitated by rhenmatism, and her painting was brought to an end Like most amateurs, she never possessed a studio nor a properly lighted room. Her postratis were either painted in her drawing-room or out-of doors.

The photographs for this collection were mostly taken by her son-in-lwe, Captain Dashwood, who understands the photography of colours and to whom the task was a labour of love The costs of printing were defrayed from the prize moneys which the artist had won at public Exhibitions

NOTES ON A FEW OF THE PAINTINGS

- No 2 This splinting was the artist's first attempt out-ofdoors. The subject was chosen and the painting completed without consultation. This sketch attracted the attention of Colonel George Strahan, the eminent water colour printer, to whose encouragement the young artist owed much of her subsequent success.
- No 3 This is the only picture we now possess of the artist's work of 1897, 1889, 1889 In 1888 Mrs Burrard won her first prize at an Exhibition with an oil painting of an old "Himalayan Wood cutter on the Hill-side," but this was sold
- No 4 The picture of the "Gurkha Outpost" was suggested and arranged by Captain C B Judge, 2nd Gurkhas, who brought the models and posed them daily with kind patience. An oil painting of the Dehra Dun Bazar in strong sunlight, one of Bombay Harbour, and one of the Marble Rocks at Jubbulpore, all of 1890, were lost
- No 8 The artist passed the Pathru when he was mending a road near a cliff In deeding to make a picture she acquiesced too hastily in the Pathan's request that it should be done in the middle of the day. It was not till she had worked for some days that she came to realise the effects of the glare in June. The sun was almost vertically overhead. The glare affected the Pathan's eyes. The subject would have been easier in the morning or evening. Colonel Strahan watched the progress of the painting with kindly interest. When he saw how the artist was representing the red sorrel on the hillside and the haze over the distance, he said to her sympathetically. "Why, Mrs. Burrard, I have always thought that Figure painting was your forte, but I believe it is going to be Landscape." The artist replied "I don't think I have a forte, whether I am painting a land-scape or a figure, I only punt what I see." When in 1894 the portrait No. 16 was in progress, a friend who saw the model sitting said to the artist. "You will find that white beard very difficult." The artist replied. "I don't think that a white beard is more difficult than other things in Nature, it tells its story, and I paint what I see." These remarks were impressed upon my mind, for I tried for veats to learn from my wife the secret of her facility both in drawing Nature's curves and in discerning the colours of shadows and shades. She could see deeply and she remembered what she saw.

In 1892 she painted a group of Himalayan cooles, clothed in brown blankets, scated under a protruding rock. This pifture was sold at Simla, and I regretted its departure. Her domestic duties put an end to her groups of figures out of doors, which took up too much time, she had in future to be content with models in the verandali.

No 11 This portrait was painted at the suggestion of Major C B Judge, 2nd Gurthas The model was resiless, he could not ut still, unless he were allowed to smoke He complained that his medals and ribands were not being given sufficient prominence in the pidure, and Major Judge rather agreed with him. The artist wished to subdue the brightness of the medals and the brilliance of the ribands, she said that she was painting a soldier and not medals. The Subadar said that if his medals were right, nothing else mattered. Under pressure the artist did make the medals more prominent than she liked. She sent the pidure to the Western India Exhibition at Poona in 1894. There were 518 paintings exhibited, and Mrs Burrard's portrait was awarded the highest prize of the Exhibition. The prize list was as follows.

(1) Prize offered by the Governor of Bombay for the best picture of the Exhibition, awarded to Mrs S G Burrard for her portrait of the Subadar Major

(2) Lady Harris's prize for the best water colour landscape, awarded to Captain W. J. Bythell, R.E.

(3) The Communder-in-Chief's prize for the best picture by an officer of the Army, awarded to Colonel H H Hart, R E

On the return of her picture from Poona Mrs Burrard punted a rephea which she gave to Major Judge. The original portrait is now at Hungerford with the artist's son, and the replica is at Ash Vale with Mrs. Lewis Hall, Major Judge's daughter. Major Judge wis killed at Dargai in 1897.

Nos 32, 33, 34 These three portraits now hang in the Office of the Survey of India in Calcutta The photographs of these portraits for this collection were very kindly taken by the Officer in charge of Photo Litho Office

No 35 The silver bowl bears the following inscription

PRESENTED TO MRS S G BURRARD

by Officers of the Survey of India as a small expression of thanks for her kindness in painting and presenting to the Department portraits of Sir George Everest, General Strahan, and Colonel Gore

January, 1907

This bowl remuned in daily use from 1907 to 1928, and was more valued by the artist than all her prizes at public Exhibitions

With the bowl Mrs Burrard received the following letter from the Surveyor General of India

BHAMO, UPPER BURMA,

19 2 07

My DEAR MRS BURRARD,

For a long time past we have been wondering what we could do to express our gratitude to you for the trouble you took in painting the portraits of Sir George Everest, General Strahan, and Colonel Gore for the Survey Office Gallery. After vanly endeavouring to get a good lot of interesting books and failing it was decided to send you a flower bowl with a little inscription on it and this Colonel Renny Tailyour is sending off to your liusband to take home with him, and we—that is all the Officers of the Survey—hope you will like it, and that it will remind you at times of the fact that you helped so materially to make our gallery complete and that you have held your own as a portrait painter will the best

We send with it our best wishes to you and yours and hoping to see you back amongst us before long

With kindest regards,
Yours very sincerely,
F. B. Longe

No 37 This was one of a pair painted on account of an argument that the jungle was monotonous and colourless. The feature of this sketch is the bright and varied colouring.

No 38 This prize picture was bought at the Simla Exhibition by the late Sir James Walker When Lady Burrard died in 1928 Lady Walker with great kindness and gene rosity presented the picture to the priest's family

No 39 At the Exhibition at Naim Tal in 1908 Mrs Burrard won both the first and the third prizes with the two pictures she exhibited. The prize list was as follows

First Prize for the best picture of the Exhibition awarded to Mrs S G Burrard for her oil painting of a Pourheal Brahmin

Prize for the second best Figure awarded to Mrs S G
Burrard for her portrait of A Native of Garhwal

The prize picture of the 'Poorberh Brahmin' was sold and is not available for this collection. The picture of the Native of Garhwal' is shown as No. 39

No 40 When Art Exhibitions were held in India the leading newspapers generally published critical notices of some of the pictures. Mrs. Burrard's Indian portruits were often noticed by critics and their remarks were of interest and value. In 1908 the Art critic at Simila wrote.

Mrs Burrard has for many years made a speciality of Indian portraits the ease with which she has found varied and interesting subjects in her every day surroundings has been a lesson to us. Although her portraiture is tinged with sadness her artistic rendering is always sympathetic.

No 41 Mts Burrard gave this picture to Miss Doris Mackinnon in 1909 on the occasion of the latter's wedding When the artist died in 1988 General and Mts Stratford Robinson with very great kindness asked the artist's family to accept the picture back

No 42 This water colour is without detail but it illus trates the artists truth in her reading of nature. The colouring makes the foreground and hillsides look damp and there is a general feeling of the dampness characteristic of the monsoon. Many people looking at this picture have exclaimed. How damp Mussoorce looks

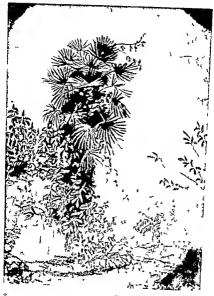

No 50 This painting was the last occasion on which the artist used her easel. In 1914 she became crippled with rheumatism at Calcutta and her career as a painter ended at the age of forty six.

No 51 The art st was constantly impressed by the view of Faletti's Hotel Cecil at Simla as seen from the Foreign Office; it was visible from her rickshaw during the daily outing. Her artistic instincts were aroused, and she painted this picture on four afternoons in water colours from her rickshaw, handicapped by rheumatism of the hands.
